13. Medical Sciences Program for Preemptive Medicine

In Japan, it is a matter of social urgency to reduce the burden of soaring medical costs stemming from the rapid aging of our society, and in this regard, preemptive medicine can fulfill a vital role as a "gatekeeper", that does not allow people to enter the "world of disease". In the near future, individual human genome and epigenome data, real time electronic medical information, and data of lifestyle habits and environmental factors collected in real time as sensing technologies advance will be integrated to create medical big data. The results of analyzing those data using newly developed data mining technologies will help realize personalized preemptive medicine. The Medical Sciences Program for Preemptive Medicine is provided for the purpose of nurturing individuals who can cope with such major changes in the health care environment.

The Medical Sciences Program for Preemptive Medicine is provided in an add-on form in all the major fields of the degrees to make the study of preemptive medicine available to all students in the Master's Program. Thus, by studying the subjects stipulated by this program with regard to the elective subjects in each degree major field, the students will have a supplementary note appended to their diploma, which states that they have completed the Medical Sciences Program for Preemptive Medicine, in addition to the Master's degree (Master of Medical Science, Dental Science, Medical Laboratory Science, Oral Health Care Science, Master of Science, Master of Engineering). Through this program, students with different areas of specialization will be able to study together, which will have the advantage of facilitating close collaboration among them.

The prospective students will be asked whether they wish to take the Medical Sciences Program for Preemptive Medicine after enrolling (around 10 students per academic year).

For further information concerning this program, please contact below.

14. Clinical Epidemiology Program

In this program, students select a professor who promotes clinical epidemiology (see below) as a supervisor and write a dissertation in clinical epidemiology in collaboration with their clinical supervisor. First, students select 5 classroom-lecture based courses from 8 courses and obtain 5 credits. Then, in the seminar course (1 credit), students learn statistical analysis methods using software and prepare for writing dissertation. It is possible to take classroom-lecture based courses without entering CEP.

The prospective students will be asked whether they wish to take CEP after enrolling.
