What is Global Health for you? Your personal values matter

Abstract

Global Health addresses cross-border and multi-level health issues across different sectors.

As medicine is heading into precision medicine, Global Health is evolving into Precision Global Health where it aims to better target public health interventions on a global scale.

In order to “provide the right intervention to the right population at the right time,” we need to better understand social values, which can be variable across populations and regions, and change over time, and such exercise starts with better understanding of your values as a health care professional.

The lecture aims to provide the participants opportunities to think where we are in Global Health, and to reflect on your values as a fundamental trait.
